A celebration of chickens

Paragraph A

Christopher O'Connor, the famous wildlife photographer, has written a new book – and the subject is rather surprising! In the past, Mr O'Connor has written about lions, elephants and snakes, but his latest book is about chickens! However, these are not ordinary chickens – they are a wonderful breed called the Serama.

Paragraph B

Mr O'Connor discovered Serama chickens while he was on holiday in Malaysia, where he saw an advertisement for a chicken beauty contest! He decided to attend and was amazed to see that people had brought their birds from all over the country. They were competing for a prize of around £1,000.

Paragraph C

He noticed the Seramas in particular because they were not just beautiful but also very small. In fact, they are the smallest type of chicken in the world. He has been taking photos of these special birds ever since that day.

Paragraph D

In his book, Mr O'Connor tells an interesting traditional story about the birds' origins. It is said that the first Serama chicken was once a prince who was very handsome but extremely proud. One day an old lady asked the prince if she could have a drink of water but he refused, so she turned him into a chicken.

Paragraph E

Serama chickens come from Japan and were first imported to the UK in 2005. They are very good natured and calm. In the book, one owner, Alan Smith from York, describes how his friendly Serama once followed him all the way to the corner shop, waited for him to buy a newspaper, then accompanied him back home again!

Paragraph F

So it's not surprising that Serama chickens are becoming more and more popular. I predict that Mr O'Connor's fascinating and beautiful book will only increase demand – perhaps they will become the most wanted pet this year!

The Plain English Campaign

Paragraph one

What's the longest sentence you have ever seen? In 2005, a council in the north of England put up a notice about its plans to change a public footpath. The notice had only one sentence – but that sentence contained 630 words! You can read it all on the website of the Plain English Campaign.

Paragraph two

 A (Example) . It campaigns against 'gobbledygook, jargon and misleading public information' – in other words, against English that is difficult for ordinary people to understand.

Paragraph three

 7. . Chrissie had very little formal education and was angry because so many official letters and forms were difficult to read. So she stood in the square and tore up hundreds of official documents.

Paragraph four

At the protest, a policeman told Chrissie to stop. He read out part of a law called the Metropolitan Police Act, which was written in 1839 and was full of complex sentences. 'Does that nonsense mean we have to go?' asked Chrissie! Some journalists thought this was hilarious and wrote about the incident in their newspapers. The Plain English Campaign became famous.

Paragraph five

When Chrissie started the campaign, her aim was to make life easier for people who, like her, could not read very well. In fact, everyone benefits if official documents are written in clear language.

Paragraph six

 8. . They estimated this saved them £15 million – if people can grasp the meaning of the forms easily, they are less likely to make errors when they fill them in and this saves the Government time and money.

Paragraph seven

 9. . This includes using shorter sentences and choosing common words instead of very formal ones. For example, you don't need to say 'for the duration of' – you can just say 'while' or 'during'.

Paragraph eight

The campaign runs training courses for lawyers, politicians and academics, and has a team of editors who will 'translate' official documents into comprehensible English.

Paragraph nine

 10. . It also has an award for organisations that are guilty of writing in English that is unnecessarily difficult to read.

Becoming a fire safety volunteer can change your life! Read what some of our volunteers say about it.

Saira, aged 21

Languages: English and Hindi

I was born in Britain so I am a native English speaker but my parents are Indian so I can speak Hindi too. I have always been frightened of speaking in public but this programme has really helped build my confidence.

Metin, aged 18

Languages: Hungarian and English

I've been in England for two years now and heard about the training through Shahina, my careers adviser at college. I was a bit apprehensive that my English wouldn't be good enough but in fact I was relieved to find I could understand the trainers and the material fairly easily. If you take up this opportunity, you'll be challenged but you'll learn loads of new vocabulary and you also get the chance to meet people from all over the world.

To Whom It May Concern

Re: Mr Abdul Aziz

I am Abdul's personal tutor at Farmouth College. When Abdul first enrolled on our ESOL course he knew no English at all. Since then he has worked tirelessly to improve his spoken and written English. He has attended every class on the course and done hours of independent study. As a result of his efforts, he has progressed from Entry 1 to Level 1 in just three years, which is an amazing achievement.

Abdul is punctual, hardworking and always respectful to his tutors and fellow students. He was elected by his peers to the student council, where he has served with enthusiasm and dedication.

I have no hesitation in recommending Abdul and am confident that he would make an excellent volunteer. Should you need any further information please do not hesitate to contact me.
