Task 1

Elephants

Paragraph one

There are two types of elephant – the African elephant and the Asian elephant, which is sometimes known as the Indian elephant. If you looked at a photo of them they might look the same at first glance, but if you took a longer, closer look you would see the differences.

Paragraph two

C (Example). The Asian elephant has much smaller ears, whereas the African elephant's ears are much larger and cover its neck. But in real life, the most noticeable difference is their size. African elephants are around a metre taller and approximately 1,000kg heavier.

Paragraph three

1. For example, the shapes of their bodies, and their skin are not the same. Asian elephants look rounder and have smoother skin. They also tend to have more toenails and although it is possible for African elephants to have five toenails on their front feet and four on the back, it is rare. They usually have four on the front and three on the back.

Paragraph four

2. They both eat grass and plants. They pull these from the trees and ground using their long noses, which are called trunks. They wave their trunks around to improve their sense of smell and this helps them locate their next meal.

Paragraph five

3. They greet each other by wrapping their trunks together. They have a celebration when an elephant returns after being away and if a baby elephant is unhappy, all the other elephants come to help.

Task 3

Bees in the UK

Paragraph A

Experts are warning that the number of bees in the UK is becoming dangerously low. Both main types of bee – the honey bee and the bumble bee – have decreased in number significantly in the last 10 years.

Paragraph B

Bees are very important for growing fruit and vegetables. If the number of bees continues to fall, the UK will lose a lot of money. This is because the sale of fresh food brings in millions of pounds every year.

Paragraph C

Scientists say there are two reasons why bees are decreasing in number. The first reason is that new diseases are killing them. The second reason is that farmers are changing the way they grow food.

Paragraph D

There are ways you can help. One way is to grow a wide variety of plants to attract bees to your garden. Ideally, you should have plants that have flowers at different times of the year. This is because honey bees, unlike bumble bees, need food during the winter.

Paragraph E

For more information about how to help bees, visit the 'Save the Bee' website. It has information on voluntary groups that look after bees and a list of plants and flowers you can grow in your garden to help them.
